THE South-Carolina GAZETTE

[Numb. 965]

From the Gentleman's Magazine, for April, 1752.

MANY inſtances might be given of the wonderful force of inward Compunction and Horrors, that ſometimes poſſeſs a guilty mind, and are awakened there by the moſt unexpected circumſtances.

I dare ſay, ſir, that your acquaintance with hiſtory and the world, will ſuggeſt to you many examples of this kind, in which it muſt be own'd, that the Hand of Providence is very conſpicuous. I beg leave to mention one, becauſe it is a true ſtory, and happened in a neighbouring ſtate not many years ago.

A Jeweller, a man of good character and conſiderable wealth, having occaſion, in the way of his buſineſs, to travel at ſome diſtance from the place of his abode, took along with him a ſervant, in order to look after his portmantua. He had along with him ſome of his beſt jewels, and a large ſum of money, to which his ſervant was privy. The maſter having occaſion to diſmount on the road, the ſervant watch'd his opportunity, took a piſtol from his maſter's ſaddle, and ſhot him dead on the ſpot. Then rifling him of his jewels and money, and hanging a large ſtone to his neck, he threw him into the neareſt canal. With his booty he made off to a diſtant part of the country, where he had reaſon to believe that neither he nor his maſter were known. There he began to trade in a very low way at firſt, that his obſcurity might ſcreen him from obſervation, and in the courſe of a good many years ſeemed to riſe, by the natural progreſs of buſineſs, into wealth and conſideration; ſo that his good fortune appeared at once the effect and reward of his induſtry and virtue. Of theſe he counterfeited the appearances ſo well, that he grew in great credit, married into a good family, and by laying out his hidden ſtores diſcreetly, as he ſaw occaſion, and joining to all an univerſal affability, he was admitted to a ſhare of the government of the town, and roſe from one poſt to another, till at length he was choſen chief magiſtrate. In this office he maintain'd a fair cha[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] ſentence of the preſident of the court (which he happened to be that day) with great ſuſpence. Mean while he appeared to be in an unuſual diſorder and agitation of mind, his colour changed often; at length he roſe from his ſeat, and coming down from the bench, placed himſelf juſt by the unfortunate man at the bar, to the no ſmall aſtoniſhment of all preſent. You ſee before you, ſaid he (addreſſing himſelf to thoſe who had ſat on the bench with him) a ſtriking Inſtance of the juſt Reward of Murder, which this Day, after thirty Years Concealment, preſents to you a greater Criminal than the Man juſt now found guilty. Then he made an ample confeſſion of his guilt, and of all its aggravations, particularly the ingratitude of it to a maſter, who had raiſed him from the very duſt, and repoſed a peculiar confidence in him; and told them in what manner he had hitherto ſcreen'd himſelf from public juſtice, and how he had eſcaped the obſervation of mankind by the ſpecious maſk he had wore. But now, added he, no ſooner did this unhappy Priſoner appear before us, charged with the ſame Crime I was conſcious of myſelf, than the cruel Circumſtances of my Guilt beſet me in all their Horrors, the Arrows of the Almighty ſtuck faſt within me, and my own Crime appeared ſo atrocious, that I could not conſent to paſs Sentence againſt my Fellow Criminal till I had firſt impannelled and accuſed myſelf. Nor can I now feel any Relief from the Agonies of an awakened Conſcience, but by requiring that Juſtice may be forthwith done againſt me, in the moſt public and ſolemn Manner, for ſo aggravated a Parricide. Therefore in the Preſence of the All-ſeeing God, the great Witneſs and Judge of my Crime, and before this whole Aſſembly, who have been the Witneſſes of my Hypocriſy, I plead Guilty, and require Sentence may be paſſed againſt me as a moſt notorious Malefactor. We may eaſily ſuppoſe the amazement of [illegible] the aſſembly, and eſpecially of his fellow judges. However they proceeded, upon his confeſſion, to paſs ſentence upon him, and he died with all the ſymptoms of a penitent mind. An exemplary inſtance of the fatal effects of an exorbitant paſſion, and the tremendous juſtice of providence, in detecting one of the moſt cool and artful villains, after ſuch a long concealment.

LONDON, July 12. [illegible] The project upon which [illegible] and Mr. Moore are [illegible] in France is, to make cannon lighter, more laſting, and more efficacious than they are at preſent. They have contrived a new ſpecies of mixed metal, one fifth of the weight of a common cannon will carry farther with half the uſual quantity of gun powder, fire more expeditiouſly, and be leſs liable to burſt or to melt. The experiment was in [illegible] preſented here, but not approved of by thoſe who had the power to inſpect it. They therefore made application to the court of France, where after repeated trials, they have ſo far ſucceeded that it is reported they have been offered 20,000 Louis d'Ors, upon the diſcovery of the ſecret, 12,000 Louis d'Ors yearly between them, which annuity is to be continued to the ſurvivor, and to be beſides entitled to the rank and pay of lieutenant colonels in the French army.

Conſtantinople (in Turky) July 15. The depoſition of the Grand Vizir, and the Aga of the Janiſſaries, who are both baniſhed, and whoſe diſgrace is very much lamented, has been followed by the tragical death of the Kiſlar Aga and the Tefterdar, who had found out the way to engroſs the whole confidence of the Grand Signior, and committed inſufferable oppreſſions. The people being no longer able to bear with the inſatiable avarice of theſe greedy monſters, were ripe for an inſurrection, which at length opened his highneſs's eyes, and determined him to give his ſubjects an ample ſatisfaction, by the puniſhment of theſe miniſters. Accordingly their heads were by him cauſed to be ſtruck off, and their bodies were expoſed three days before the gate of the Seraglio.

London, Aug. 11. The late Kiſlar Aga of Turky had governed the empire for many years, raiſing and removing Vizirs at his pleaſure, and was held to be better verſed in the politicks of the Seraglio than any other perſon in it. Some aſcribe theſe changes to the prevailing influence of the prince ſucceſſor.

Vienna, Aug. 9. According to advices from Conſtantinople that are looked upon as very authentic here, the Grand Signior is very much perplexed ſince the true deſign of the late commotions was to force him into a war, and that it is feared the party who ſupport this meaſure, will not be quiet till they have brought it to bear.

London, Aug. 18. The party in the oppoſition at Conſtantinople flatter themſelves, that after various ineffectual attempts, they have at length carried their point. The Kiſlar Aga had gained an abſolute aſcendancy over the Grand Signior, by complying with his pacific diſpoſition, and furniſhing him with continual expedients to preſerve peace [illegible]

From the Univerſal Magazine for June, 1752.

To the Proprietors of the Univerſal Magazine.

GENTLEMEN,

I have ever ſome Time obſerved that the freeſt Method of tranſmitting any Thing to the Public, is to get it inſerted in your Magazine, which is perused by all Degrees of People. [illegible] and as the following Obſervations, which are of the greateſt Conſequence to Society, were publiſhed in Latin by Dr. [illegible], in the Philoſophical Tranſactions, No. [illegible] Inſtance, I hope that you will [illegible] the following Tranſlation a Place in your uſeful Collection, which will [illegible] of your numerous Readers, particularly your Well-wiſher. MEDICUS.

Cautions to Parents and Nurſes, with regard to the Manner of holding their Infants.

THE doctor obſerved, in an infant which died at eight months old, a prodigious gibboſity of the ſternum, or breaſt-bone, which he thinks was owing entirely to accident and bad management, and not to any thing in nature. The breaſt was very prominent and ſharp before, and preſſed in at the ſides. Beſides the narrowneſs of the breaſt that appeared externally, ſeveral of the ribs, eſpecially on the left ſide, were, on diſſection, found to be forced in, and the cartilages hollowed, the hollow appearing upwards, or on the exterior part, and a gibboſity on the interior. All this had tended to render the hollow of the thorax ſtill ſmaller, and conſequently to give leſs room than nature had intended to the viſcera contained in it. This evidently cauſed the death of the child, and, it is to be preſumed that many others who eſcape the fortune of ſo eaſy a death, live miſerably, and groan under the diſeaſes acknowledged to be incurable, and ſaid to ariſe from an ill formation of the breaſt; which conformation the doctor juſtly obſerves is often not owing to nature, but to ſervants and nurſes entruſted with the care of the ſubjects, while very young.

Theſe people ignorant of the tender ſtructure and delicate compages of theſe young creatures, are not at all upon their guard, as to their method of handling them. It is common to pleaſe or quiet a child by ſetting its back on the left hand, inclining the body forward, ſo as to re[illegible]

[illegible] that the firſt cauſe of the diſtreſs is over, and that the crying now is from the pain they give by the very means by which they attempt to calm it.

It is not uncommon to ſee the marks of a thumb on the right ſide of the infant's breaſt, and thoſe of the four fingers on the left, very deeply impreſſed when the child is let down again. To this method of ſqueezing it, the doctor abſolutely attributes the narrow and ſharp form of the breaſt; and what abundantly confirms this opinion, he found the ribs diſplaced in the diſſection, juſt as they would, and muſt be, by the preſſure of an expanded hand, [illegible] on the left ſide, and [illegible] on the right, where the thumb only comes in this method of holding the child; and as to the cavities or hollows in the cartilages, he found them exactly correſpond with the places where the four fingers and thumb of the nurſe had been placed in the [illegible] plaits. On applying his own hand, with the fingers open, to the breaſt, the ends of his fingers [illegible] exactly into the depreſſions in the cartilages. [illegible] this infant therefore periſhed from being held in this manner is certainly [illegible] diſpute [illegible] it appear much leſs certain that numbers of others, whoſe deaths have been attributed to different cauſes, have died [illegible] the ſame unhappy manner. As theſe obſervations are evidently of the greateſt conſequence, and written in Latin, not poſſible to be read by [illegible] to whom alone they can be of any uſe, I thought myſelf obliged, as a member of ſociety, to tranſlate them for the good of mankind, eſpecially when I reflected [illegible] of a friend may be deſtroyed for want of [illegible] ons, ſo early tranſmitted. If this ſhould [illegible] tend to ſave the life of one ſingle infant, I ſhall think the [illegible] troubling you with your [illegible]
